MEMORANDUM FOR: Director of Training

SUBJECT: Topics for Proposed State Department Senior Course

1. Herewith is a list of topics which might be included in the proposed State Department course and which could be presented by members of the DD/I area.

✓ a. Historical Background of American Intelligence:

This could cover the period of the 1930s through World War II and then the post-war development of our present intelligence community.

✓ b. Structure of the Intelligence Community:

This would cover the National Security Council and its directives, the IAC and could include the organization of the DD/I area which I would propose presenting not in an organizational manner but by its three major functions: overt collection, intelligence production and documentary services.

c. Production of National Intelligence:

This would cover the machinery involved in preparing national estimates.

policy and the problems involved therein.

f. Continuing Problems of Intelligence:

This will be a discussion of such problems as are involved in collection, a full disclosure of information between government agencies, coordination, relations with our allies, relations with Congress, etc.

2. I think the above topics are rather flexible and could be presented concisely or considerably developed. I also think we should cover somewhere in the DD/I presentation the collection effort of our embassies and its use and processing in our development of current and national intelligence.
